Wesleyan Church - Redruth

In 1850 there was a grant of twenty acres of glebe land and half an acre in the town with the foundation stone of a chapel being laid in February 1851. Because of the gold rush this chapel remained empty and was closed in 1854 and the Kooringa trustees dismantled it taking the roof, floor, windows, door, pulpit and seats fro use in a new chapel at Spring Farm, near Clare. During 1857, the Kooringa trustees restored the Redruth chapel by using the old windows, seats, pulpit and part of the roof from the Kooringa chapel, when it was enlarged, at a cost of £150.
In August 1873 the trustees decided to build the existing chapel at a cost of £1,340 and a foundation stone was laid with its constructed completed soon after.

Opening of the Jubilee Hall, Redruth

This building originally the Primitive Methodist chapel was extended soon after the Methodist Union in 1900 to become the United Sunday School and was known as the Jubilee Hall, prior to this the Sunday school had been conducted in a stable. The Jubilee Hall served this purpose until 1925.
Because it was some distance from the Wesleyan chapel, it was decided to build new Sunday school adjoining the Redruth church at a cost of £5,000. This building was opened in February 1925.
The church closed in 1970.
